Safety Tips For Solar Window Blinds For Your Children and Pets

by admin

It is important for each of us to know how to raise awareness on the dangers of solar window blinds. Each year, many children are rushed to local emergency rooms due to injuries sustained when playing with the cords, or pulling on the cords that are part of window shades and window blinds. Pets have also been known to suffer from injuries due to these same types of cords.

As a parent, I feel that it is absolutely necessary to raise awareness of other parents and pet owners regarding this type of danger lurking in the home. Here, you will be taught how to know the dangers of window treatments.

The very first step that you can do to alert others on the dangers of window blinds is to observe these precautions in your own home. Make sure that all cords attached to solar window blinds are tied up highly. Not only will this help to avoid trips and potential falls, but it will divert the attention of children and animals from playing and pulling on the cords.

Window treatment in New York can install the best kind of window shades and window blinds together instruction on safety. Get the help of a window shades manufacturer in New York to give instruction on additional safety measures. By integrating safety in your own home, your visitors will see that you take the subject very seriously and may start to make the same changes and precautions in their homes, too.

The next thing that you can do to raise awareness about the dangers of cords on solar window blinds is to alert your local government. You should write letters to local legislators and those that work over your entire state. Persuade these individuals to make laws for daycare and educational facilities that require them to eliminate use of cords on window treatments.

In stating your case, it is important to offer alternatives for covering windows. This may include standard window treatments which can be purchased from a window blinds provider in New York.

To be honest, one of the last things that these officials have on their mind is safety with window blind cords. However, your letter will put this consideration out there.

If you have a knack for research, and can come up with some pretty strong evidence that solar window blinds pose potential dangers, you may elect to contact news reporters. You can choose those that work for local papers, or those that work on

Save on your heating bill

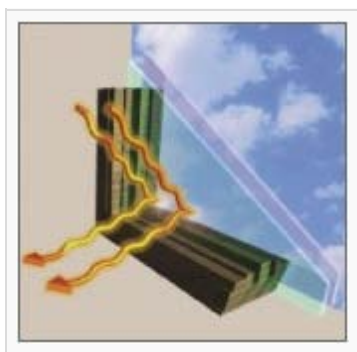

by admin

Windows

Windows can be one of your home's most attractive features. Windows provide views, daylighting, ventilation, and solar heating in the winter. Unfortunately, they can also account for 10% to 25% of your heating bill. During the summer, your air conditioner must work harder to cool hot air from sunny windows. Install ENERGY STAR windows and use curtains and shade to give your air conditioner and energy bill a break. If you live in the Sun Belt, look into new solar control spectrally selective windows, which can cut the cooling load by 10% to 15%.

If your home has single-pane windows, as almost half of U.S. homes do, consider replacing them. New doublepane windows with high-performance glass (e.g., low-e or spectrally selective) are available on the market. In colder climates, select windows that are gas filled with low emissivity (low-e) coatings on the glass to reduce heat loss. In warmer climates, select windows with spectrally selective coatings to reduce heat gain. If you are building a new home, you can offset some of the cost of installing more efficient windows because doing so allows you to buy smaller, less expensive heating and cooling equipment.

If you decide not to replace your windows, the simpler, less costly measures listed below can improve their performance.

Cold Climate Windows Keep Heat In

Double-pane windows with low-e coating on the glass reflect heat back into the room during the winter months.

Cold-Climate Window Tips

You can use a heavy-duty, clear plastic sheet on a frame or tape clear plastic film to the inside of your window frames during the cold winter months. Remember, the plastic must be sealed tightly to the frame to help reduce infiltration.

Install tight-fitting, insulating window shades on windows that feel drafty after weatherizing.

Close your curtains and shades at night; open them during the day.
Keep windows on the south side of your house clean to let in the winter sun.
Install exterior or interior storm windows; storm windows can reduce heat loss through the windows by 25% to 50%. Storm windows should have weatherstripping at all moveable joints; be made of strong, durable materials; and have interlocking or overlapping joints. Low-e storm windows save even more energy.
Repair and weatherize your current storm windows, if necessary.

Warm Climate Windows Keep Heat Out

In the summertime, the sun shining through your windows heats up the room. Windows with spectrally selective coatings on the glass reflect some of the sunlight, keeping your rooms cooler.

Warm-Climate Window Tips

Install white window shades, drapes, or blinds to reflect heat away from the house.

Close curtains on south- and west-facing windows during the day.

Install awnings on south- and west-facing windows.

Apply sun-control or other reflective films on south-facing windows to reduce solar gain.

$ Long-Term Savings Tip: Installing new, high-performance windows will improve your home's energy performance. While it may take many years for new windows to pay off in energy savings, the benefits of added comfort and improved aesthetics and functionality may make the investment worth it to you. Today, many new window technologies are available that are worth considering. Glazing materials (the glass part of the window) now come with a variety of selective coatings and other features; frames are available in aluminum, wood, vinyl, fiber glass, or combinations of these materials. Each type of glazing material and frame has advantages and disadvantages.

Shopping Tips for Windows

Look for the ENERGY STAR.

When you're shopping for new windows, look for the National Fenestration Rating Council label; it means the window's performance is certified.

Remember, the lower the U-value, the better the insulation. In colder climates, a U-value of 0.35 or below is recommended. These windows have at least double glazing and a low-e coating.

In warm climates, where summertime heat gain is the main concern, look for windows with double glazing and spectrally selective coatings that reduce heat gain.

Select windows with air leakage ratings of 0.3 cubic feet per minute or less.

In temperate climates with both heating and cooling seasons, select windows with both low U-values and low solar heat gain coefficient (SHGC) to maximize energy benefits.

Remember that new windows must be installed correctly to avoid air leaks around the frame. Look for a reputable, qualified installer.

As a rule, I attempt to continue up with the comments and enter into dialog (as you have performed here) while using commenters. Dialog is so significantly added rewarding than just shouting out into the web. In the equal way as when you prepare an email or a blog post, have a think about it foremost and then perhaps respond if appropriate.

Very nice blog, although I live in the UK I thought I might post something regarding the safety aspect of electric blinds. Many people are unaware that cord operated blinds are a safety hazzard where young children are concerned, sadly there are too many cases where children have got tangled in the cords. Electric blinds or shutters do not have this problem so are therefore safer, yes you may pay a little more but the benefits are 100 fold.

Kindest regards Hillary.

Safety Tips For Solar Window Blinds For Your Children and Pets

by admin

It is important for each of us to know how to raise awareness on the dangers of solar window blinds. Each year, many children are rushed to local emergency rooms due to injuries sustained when playing with the cords, or pulling on the cords that are part of window shades and window blinds. Pets have also been known to suffer from injuries due to these same types of cords.

As a parent, I feel that it is absolutely necessary to raise awareness of other parents and pet owners regarding this type of danger lurking in the home. Here, you will be taught how to know the dangers of window treatments.

The very first step that you can do to alert others on the dangers of window blinds is to observe these precautions in your own home. Make sure that all cords attached to solar window blinds are tied up highly. Not only will this help to avoid trips and potential falls, but it will divert the attention of children and animals from playing and pulling on the cords.

Window treatment in New York can install the best kind of window shades and window blinds together instruction on safety. Get the help of a window shades manufacturer in New York to give instruction on additional safety measures. By integrating safety in your own home, your visitors will see that you take the subject very seriously and may start to make the same changes and precautions in their homes, too.

The next thing that you can do to raise awareness about the dangers of cords on solar window blinds is to alert your local government. You should write letters to local legislators and those that work over your entire state. Persuade these individuals to make laws for daycare and educational facilities that require them to eliminate use of cords on window treatments.

In stating your case, it is important to offer alternatives for covering windows. This may include standard window treatments which can be purchased from a window blinds provider in New York.

To be honest, one of the last things that these officials have on their mind is safety with window blind cords. However, your letter will put this consideration out there.

If you have a knack for research, and can come up with some pretty strong evidence that solar window blinds pose potential dangers, you may elect to contact news reporters. You can choose those that work for local papers, or those that work on

Window Blinds

When it comes to choosing the right shades or blinds for your windows, the best combination is to blend beauty with practicality. The Shade Company's wide selections of window blinds are unmatched throughout New York City for their range of decorative designs and styles, material selections and flexibility. If you're looking for the smart choice your windows then look no further than The Shade Company's unique selection listed below.

Flexibility

One of the key advantages of window blinds is their flexibility. Unlike many window coverings, window blinds permit the most accurate control over the amount of light or shade you would like in a room.

Whether you want warm rays of sunshine bursting through your windows or just small streams of light, horizontal blinds allow you achieve this - just by varying the position of their moveable slats.

Or maybe you'd prefer vertical blinds for their dramatic heightening effect and their flexibility and ease of letting more sunlight in or shutting all light out when you want a little privacy.

Material Selection

When buying window blinds from The Shade Company you can create your own sophisticated look with our wide selection of materials such as:

- Wood
- Faux wood
- PVC
- Vinyl
- Wood/vinyl blends
- Fabric
- Aluminum

Different looks can be achieved with these materials just by using applying them to either horizontal or vertical blinds. Or for a more decorative look, why not add one or more of our vibrant fabrics into the mix.

Decorative Designs & Styles

The Shade Company provides the most unique and diverse range of decorative styles that New York City has to offer. Whether you're looking for traditional or contemporary, rustic or New York chic - The Shade Company will tailor the design to suit your every desire.

Create a cool and sophisticated setting with our top of the line aluminum or a homely elegance with our beautifully designed fabrics. The Shade Company's selection of wood grains, slat widths and color tones, can subtly accentuate the textures and essence of any room to create the atmosphere you are searching for.

Window Shades

For homeowners who find the combination of blinds and window curtains too cluttered, window shades may provide the perfect solution. Window shades are an individual

Motorized Blinds

The Shade Company is New York City's specialist in motorized window treatments, supplying one of the most comprehensive ranges of technical sun shading and blind systems on the market today. In just a touch of a button you have the ease and versatility of moving shades up or down, and adjusting sunlight or shade. Motorized blinds offer convenience and are the perfect shading solution, especially for windows or skylights in hard-to-reach places.

Our Hunter Douglas' PowerRise system is one of the highest quality motorized blind systems on the market today. With no wiring required, our window shading system is easy to install and maintain. Functionality is second to none with the choice of operating our motorized blinds by remote control, switches, timers, AV and Home Automation Systems. You can even adjust our shades through sun sensors adding sophistication and style to any room or office.

Skylight Shades

The Shade Company is renowned for their top quality skylight shades. Skylight shades are the perfect solution for reducing any overheating in your house or office that may arise from sunlight coming through your skylights. The Shade Company specializes in deluxe shades that will keep you comfortable whilst saving energy. Our skylight shades are easily installed with our simple do-it-yourself instructions.

Our superior Verosol fabrics are of the finest quality and are second to none on performance. The Verosol pleated blind is elegant in design and highly functional with its microscopically thin layer of aluminum on one side, providing excellent sun shading qualities.

Balcony shades look great from any angle. Mounted on a unique track system, Balcony shades combine versatility and functionality with their smooth operation and greatly enhancing insulation qualities. Their side rail provides extra support, forming a barrier around the edge of the shades and their cellular shade fabrics are energy efficient.

When purchasing Verosol fabricated skylight shades you are assured of absolute quality control as all fabrics are processed in Verosol's own production facilities. Verosol pleated blinds are renowned for their long lasting ability, and pleat stability that stays in shape for years. Thus, making Verosol blinds the ideal solution for any skylight no matter the size or shape. Operation is extremely user-friendly with manual or motorized options. Fabrics range from non-transparent to ultra-transparent and come in colors that range from light grey to deep blue. Verosol blinds will truly fit into the design and color scheme of any room.

The Shade Company's range of skylight shades includes the most versatile and elegantly designed shades on the market. They are easy to install and maintain as they repel dust and rarely require cleaning. With our variety of skylight shades The Shade Company will find the perfect solution for you.

Kid's Room Design

As a rule, I attempt to continue up with the comments and enter into dialog (as you have performed here) while using commenters. Dialog is so significantly added rewarding than just shouting out into the web. In the equal way as when you prepare an email or a blog post, have a think about it foremost and then perhaps respond if appropriate.

Safety Tips For Solar Window Blinds For Your Children and Pets

by admin ✉

It is important for each of us to know how to raise awareness on the dangers of solar window blinds. Each year, many children are rushed to local emergency rooms due to injuries sustained when playing with the cords, or pulling on the cords that are part of window shades and window blinds. Pets have also been known to suffer from injuries due to these same types of cords.

As a parent, I feel that it is absolutely necessary to raise awareness of other parents and pet owners regarding this type of danger lurking in the home. Here, you will be taught how to know the dangers of window treatments.

The very first step that you can do to alert others on the dangers of window blinds is to observe these precautions in your own home. Make sure that all cords attached to solar window blinds are tied up highly. Not only will this help to avoid trips and potential falls, but it will divert the attention of children and animals from playing and pulling on the cords.

Window treatment in New York can install the best kind of window shades and window blinds together instruction on safety. Get the help of a window shades manufacturer in New York to give instruction on additional safety measures. By integrating safety in your own home, your visitors will see that you take the subject very seriously and may start to make the same changes and precautions in their homes, too.

The next thing that you can do to raise awareness about the dangers of cords on solar window blinds is to alert your local government. You should write letters to local legislators and those that work over your entire state. Persuade these individuals to make laws for daycare and educational facilities that require them to eliminate use of cords on window treatments.

In stating your case, it is important to offer alternatives for covering windows. This may include standard window treatments which can be purchased from a window blinds provider in New York.

To be honest, one of the last things that these officials have on their mind is safety with window blind cords. However, your letter will put this consideration out there.

If you have a knack for research, and can come up with some pretty strong evidence that solar window blinds pose potential dangers, you may elect to contact news

Save on your heating bill

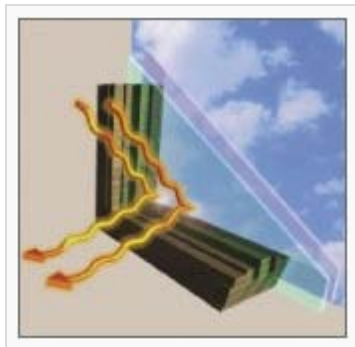

by admin

Windows

Windows can be one of your home's most attractive features. Windows provide views, daylighting, ventilation, and solar heating in the winter. Unfortunately, they can also account for 10% to 25% of your heating bill. During the summer, your air conditioner must work harder to cool hot air from sunny windows. Install ENERGY STAR windows and use curtains and shade to give your air conditioner and energy bill a break. If you live in the Sun Belt, look into new solar control spectrally selective windows, which can cut the cooling load by 10% to 15%.

If your home has single-pane windows, as almost half of U.S. homes do, consider replacing them. New doublepane windows with high-performance glass (e.g., low-e or spectrally selective) are available on the market. In colder climates, select windows that are gas filled with low emissivity (low-e) coatings on the glass to reduce heat loss. In warmer climates, select windows with spectrally selective coatings to reduce heat gain. If you are building a new home, you can offset some of the cost of installing more efficient windows because doing so allows you to buy smaller, less expensive heating and cooling equipment.

If you decide not to replace your windows, the simpler, less costly measures listed below can improve their performance.

Cold Climate Windows Keep Heat In

Double-pane windows with low-e coating on the glass reflect heat back into the room during the winter months.

Cold-Climate Window Tips

You can use a heavy-duty, clear plastic sheet on a frame or tape clear plastic film to the inside of your window frames during the cold winter months. Remember, the plastic must be sealed tightly to the frame to help reduce infiltration.

Install tight-fitting, insulating window shades on windows that feel drafty after weatherizing.

Close your curtains and shades at night; open them during the day.

Keep windows on the south side of your house clean to let in the winter sun.

Install exterior or interior storm windows; storm windows can reduce heat loss through the windows by 25% to 50%. Storm windows should have weatherstripping at all moveable joints; be made of strong, durable materials; and have interlocking or overlapping joints. Low-e storm windows save even more energy.

Repair and weatherize your current storm windows, if necessary.

Warm Climate Windows Keep Heat Out

In the summertime, the sun shining through your windows heats up the room. Windows with spectrally selective coatings on the glass reflect some of the sunlight, keeping your rooms cooler.

Warm-Climate Window Tips

Install white window shades, drapes, or blinds to reflect heat away from the house.

Close curtains on south- and west-facing windows during the day.

Install awnings on south- and west-facing windows.

Apply sun-control or other reflective films on south-facing windows to reduce solar gain.

$ Long-Term Savings Tip: Installing new, high-performance windows will improve your home's energy performance. While it may take many years for new windows to pay off in energy savings, the benefits of added comfort and improved aesthetics and functionality may make the investment worth it to you. Today, many new window technologies are available that are worth considering. Glazing materials (the glass part of the window) now come with a variety of selective coatings and other features; frames are available in aluminum, wood, vinyl, fiber glass, or combinations of these materials. Each type of glazing material and frame has advantages and disadvantages.

Shopping Tips for Windows

Look for the ENERGY STAR.

When you're shopping for new windows, look for the National Fenestration Rating Council label; it means the window's performance is certified.

Remember, the lower the U-value, the better the insulation. In colder climates, a U-value of 0.35 or below is recommended. These windows have at least double glazing and a low-e coating.

In warm climates, where summertime heat gain is the main concern, look for windows with double glazing and spectrally selective coatings that reduce heat gain.

Select windows with air leakage ratings of 0.3 cubic feet per minute or less.

In temperate climates with both heating and cooling seasons, select windows with both low U-values and low solar heat gain coefficient (SHGC) to maximize energy benefits.

Remember that new windows must be installed correctly to avoid air leaks around the frame. Look for a reputable, qualified installer.

Make sure that all cords attached to solar window blinds are tied up highly. Not only will this help to avoid trips and potential falls, but it will divert the attention of children and animals from playing and pulling on the cords.

Window treatment in New York can install the best kind of window shades and window blinds together instruction on safety. Get the help of a window shades manufacturer in New York to give instruction on additional safety measures. By integrating safety in your own home, your visitors will see that you take the subject very seriously and may start to make the same changes and precautions in their homes, too.

The next thing that you can do to raise awareness about the dangers of cords on solar window blinds is to alert your local government. You should write letters to local legislators and those that work over your entire state. Persuade these individuals to make laws for daycare and educational facilities that require them to eliminate use of cords on window treatments.

In stating your case, it is important to offer alternatives for covering windows. This may include standard window treatments which can be purchased from a window blinds provider in New York.

To be honest, one of the last things that these officials have on their mind is safety with window blind cords. However, your letter will put this consideration out there.

If you have a knack for research, and can come up with some pretty strong evidence that solar window blinds pose potential dangers, you may elect to contact news

Save on your heating bill

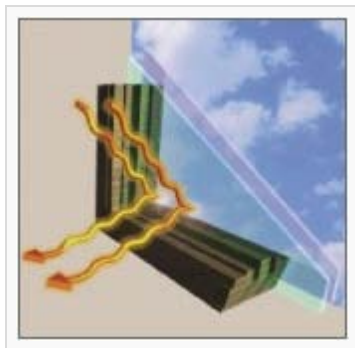

by admin

Windows

Windows can be one of your home's most attractive features. Windows provide views, daylighting, ventilation, and solar heating in the winter. Unfortunately, they can also account for 10% to 25% of your heating bill. During the summer, your air conditioner must work harder to cool hot air from sunny windows. Install ENERGY STAR windows and use curtains and shade to give your air conditioner and energy bill a break. If you live in the Sun Belt, look into new solar control spectrally selective windows, which can cut the cooling load by 10% to 15%.

If your home has single-pane windows, as almost half of U.S. homes do, consider replacing them. New doublepane windows with high-performance glass (e.g., low-e or spectrally selective) are available on the market. In colder climates, select windows that are gas filled with low emissivity (low-e) coatings on the glass to reduce heat loss. In warmer climates, select windows with spectrally selective coatings to reduce heat gain. If you are building a new home, you can offset some of the cost of installing more efficient windows because doing so allows you to buy smaller, less expensive heating and cooling equipment.

If you decide not to replace your windows, the simpler, less costly measures listed below can improve their performance.

Cold Climate Windows Keep Heat In

Double-pane windows with low-e coating on the glass reflect heat back into the room during the winter months.

Cold-Climate Window Tips

You can use a heavy-duty, clear plastic sheet on a frame or tape clear plastic film to the inside of your window frames during the cold winter months. Remember, the plastic must be sealed tightly to the frame to help reduce infiltration.

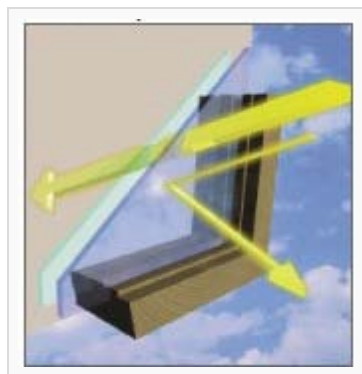

Install tight-fitting, insulating window shades on windows that feel drafty after weatherizing.

Close your curtains and shades at night; open them during the day.

Keep windows on the south side of your house clean to let in the winter sun.

Install exterior or interior storm windows; storm windows can reduce heat loss through the windows by 25% to 50%. Storm windows should have weatherstripping at all moveable joints; be made of strong, durable materials; and have interlocking or overlapping joints. Low-e storm windows save even more energy.

Repair and weatherize your current storm windows, if necessary.

Warm Climate Windows Keep Heat Out

In the summertime, the sun shining through your windows heats up the room. Windows with spectrally selective coatings on the glass reflect some of the sunlight, keeping your rooms cooler.

Warm-Climate Window Tips

Install white window shades, drapes, or blinds to reflect heat away from the house.

Close curtains on south- and west-facing windows during the day.

Install awnings on south- and west-facing windows.

Apply sun-control or other reflective films on south-facing windows to reduce solar gain.

$ Long-Term Savings Tip: Installing new, high-performance windows will improve your home's energy performance. While it may take many years for new windows to pay off in energy savings, the benefits of added comfort and improved aesthetics and functionality may make the investment worth it to you. Today, many new window technologies are available that are worth considering. Glazing materials (the glass part of the window) now come with a variety of selective coatings and other features; frames are available in aluminum, wood, vinyl, fiber glass, or combinations of these materials. Each type of glazing material and frame has advantages and disadvantages.

Shopping Tips for Windows

Look for the ENERGY STAR.

When you're shopping for new windows, look for the National Fenestration Rating Council label; it means the window's performance is certified.

Remember, the lower the U-value, the better the insulation. In colder climates, a U-value of 0.35 or below is recommended. These windows have at least double glazing and a low-e coating.

In warm climates, where summertime heat gain is the main concern, look for windows with double glazing and spectrally selective coatings that reduce heat gain.

Select windows with air leakage ratings of 0.3 cubic feet per minute or less.

In temperate climates with both heating and cooling seasons, select windows with both low U-values and low solar heat gain coefficient (SHGC) to maximize energy benefits.

Remember that new windows must be installed correctly to avoid air leaks around the frame. Look for a reputable, qualified installer.

Welcome to the Shades & Blinds Blog

by admin

This blog is not for people who can't see. This blog is people who see too much! These people need tinting or window covering. I will not try to shade here a smile, so go ahead and write funny comments about Blinds and Shades...

The Shades & Blinds Blog covers these topics:

- Motorized Shades: Functionality is second to none with the choice of operating motorized blinds by remote control, switches, timers, AV and Home Automation Systems. Visit our site for Motorized Blinds, PowerRise Motorized Blinds and PowerRise with Platinum Blinds.
- Shades New York: Create a warm and inviting setting with our Applause honeycomb shades, or a subtle hue with our Designer Screen shades, Duette honeycomb, Provenance woven wood, Trio Convertible and Vignette Modern Roman Shades.
- Window Blinds: At The Shade Company we have blinds to suit the entire family. Kid's Room Design, custom Design, Kids Roller Vcolor, safety rollerLine, Country Woods, L shape double open, Simple White Blinds and Vertical Solutions.
- Window Treatment: Window treatments add refinement and style to otherwise dull, boring windows. Shutters and awnings decorate the outside of your house, while blinds, shades, cornices, trim and draperies enhance the inside appeal. Use the guides in this section to learn how to replace, install and decorate your windows.
- More to come...

Very nice blog, although I live in the UK I thought I might post something regarding the safety aspect of electric blinds. Many people are unaware that cord operated blinds are a safety hazzard where young children are concerned, sadly there are too many cases where children have got tangled in the cords. Safety Tips For Solar Window Blinds For Your Children and Pets

by admin

It is important for each of us to know how to raise awareness on the dangers of solar window blinds. Each year, many children are rushed to local emergency rooms due to injuries sustained when playing with the cords, or pulling on the cords that are part of window shades and window blinds. Pets have also been known to suffer from injuries due to these same types of cords.

As a parent, I feel that it is absolutely necessary to raise awareness of other parents and pet owners regarding this type of danger lurking in the home. Here, you will be taught how to know the dangers of window treatments.

The very first step that you can do to alert others on the dangers of window blinds is to observe these precautions in your own home. Make sure that all cords attached to solar window blinds are tied up highly. Not only will this help to avoid trips and potential falls, but it will divert the attention of children and animals from playing and pulling on the cords.

Window treatment in New York can install the best kind of window shades and window blinds together instruction on safety. Get the help of a window shades manufacturer in New York to give instruction on additional safety measures. By integrating safety in your own home, your visitors will see that you take the subject very seriously and may start to make the same changes and precautions in their homes, too.

The next thing that you can do to raise awareness about the dangers of cords on solar window blinds is to alert your local government. You should write letters to local legislators and those that work over your entire state. Persuade these individuals to make laws for daycare and educational facilities that require them to eliminate use of cords on window treatments.

In stating your case, it is important to offer alternatives for covering windows. This may include standard window treatments which can be purchased from a window blinds provider in New York.

To be honest, one of the last things that these officials have on their mind is safety with window blind cords. However, your letter will put this consideration out there.

If you have a knack for research, and can come up with some pretty strong evidence that solar window blinds pose potential dangers, you may elect to contact news reporters. You can choose those that work for local papers, or those that work on television. These individuals have the ability to get the word out quickly.

They are always looking for a great news story, and something like blind cords that seems to be no danger at all, but prove to be a danger can make for some bold headlines! Now, you know how to raise awareness of the dangers of solar window blinds!

Save on your heating bill

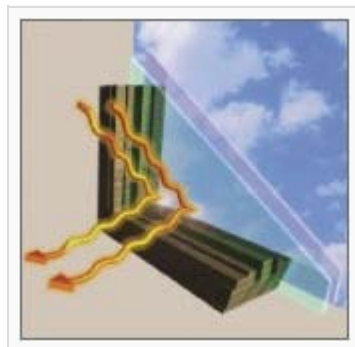

by admin

Windows

Windows can be one of your home's most attractive features. Windows provide views, daylighting, ventilation, and solar heating in the winter. Unfortunately, they can also account for 10% to 25% of your heating bill. During the summer, your air conditioner must work harder to cool hot air from sunny windows. Install ENERGY STAR windows and use curtains and shade to give your air conditioner and energy bill a break. If you live in the Sun Belt, look into new solar control spectrally selective windows, which can cut the cooling load by 10% to 15%.

If your home has single-pane windows, as almost half of U.S. homes do, consider replacing them. New doublepane windows with high-performance glass (e.g., low-e or spectrally selective) are available on the market. In colder climates, select windows that are gas filled with low emissivity (low-e) coatings on the glass to reduce heat loss. In warmer climates, select windows with spectrally selective coatings to reduce heat gain. If you are building a new home, you can offset some of the cost of installing more efficient windows because doing so allows you to buy smaller, less expensive heating and cooling equipment.

If you decide not to replace your windows, the simpler, less costly measures listed below can improve their performance.

during the winter months.

Cold-Climate Window Tips

You can use a heavy-duty, clear plastic sheet on a frame or tape clear plastic film to the inside of your window frames during the cold winter months. Remember, the plastic must be sealed tightly to the frame to help reduce infiltration.

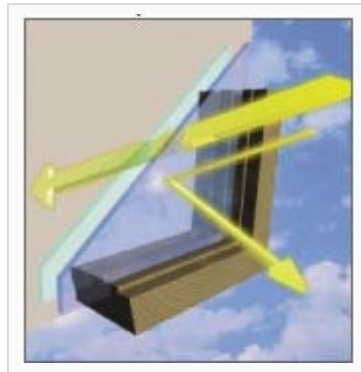

Install tight-fitting, insulating window shades on windows that feel drafty after weatherizing.

Close your curtains and shades at night; open them during the day.

Keep windows on the south side of your house clean to let in the winter sun.

Install exterior or interior storm windows; storm windows can reduce heat loss through the windows by 25% to 50%. Storm windows should have weatherstripping at all moveable joints; be made of strong, durable materials; and have interlocking or overlapping joints. Low-e storm windows save even more energy.

Repair and weatherize your current storm windows, if necessary.

Warm Climate Windows Keep Heat Out

In the summertime, the sun shining through your windows heats up the room. Windows with spectrally selective coatings on the glass reflect some of the sunlight, keeping your rooms cooler.

Warm-Climate Window Tips

Install white window shades, drapes, or blinds to reflect heat away from the house.

Close curtains on south- and west-facing windows during the day.

Install awnings on south- and west-facing windows.

Apply sun-control or other reflective films on south-facing windows to reduce solar gain.

$ Long-Term Savings Tip: Installing new, high-performance windows will improve your home's energy performance. While it may take many years for new windows to pay off in energy savings, the benefits of added comfort and improved aesthetics and functionality may make the investment worth it to you. Today, many new window technologies are available that are worth considering. Glazing materials (the glass part of the window) now come with a variety of selective coatings and other features; frames are available in aluminum, wood, vinyl, fiber glass, or combinations of these materials. Each type of glazing material and frame has advantages and disadvantages.

Shopping Tips for Windows

Look for the ENERGY STAR.

When you're shopping for new windows, look for the National Fenestration Rating Council label; it means the window's performance is certified.

Remember, the lower the U-value, the better the insulation. In colder climates, a U-value of 0.35 or below is recommended. These windows have at least double glazing and a low-e coating.

In warm climates, where summertime heat gain is the main concern, look for windows with double glazing and spectrally selective coatings that reduce heat gain.

Select windows with air leakage ratings of 0.3 cubic feet per minute or less.

In temperate climates with both heating and cooling seasons, select windows with both low U-values and low solar heat gain coefficient (SHGC) to maximize energy benefits.

Remember that new windows must be installed correctly to avoid air leaks around the frame. Look for a reputable, qualified installer.

Welcome to the Shades & Blinds Blog

by admin

This blog is not for people who can't see. This blog is people who see too much! These people need tinting or window covering. I will not try to shade here a smile, so go ahead and write funny comments about Blinds and Shades...

The Shades & Blinds Blog covers these topics:

- Motorized Shades: Functionality is second to none with the choice of operating motorized blinds by remote control, switches, timers, AV and Home Automation Systems. Visit our site for Motorized Blinds, PowerRise Motorized Blinds and PowerRise with Platinum Blinds.

- Shades New York: Create a warm and inviting setting with our Applause honeycomb shades, or a subtle hue with our Designer Screen shades, Duette honeycomb, Provenance woven wood, Trio Convertible and Vignette Modern Roman Shades.
- Window Blinds: At The Shade Company we have blinds to suit the entire family. Kid's Room Design, custom Design, Kids Roller Vcolor, safety rollerLine, Country Woods, L shape double open, Simple White Blinds and Vertical Solutions.
- Window Treatment: Window treatments add refinement and style to otherwise dull, boring windows. Shutters and awnings decorate the outside of your house, while blinds, shades, cornices, trim and draperies enhance the inside appeal. Use the guides in this section to learn how to replace, install and decorate your windows.
- More to come...

Blinds New York

This blog is not for people who can't see. This blog is people who see too much! These people need tinting or window covering. I will not try to shade here a smile, so go ahead and write funny comments about Blinds and Shades...
